“ My father was there for me when I needed him. When I was a child, he attended every practice and game when I played ball even through high school. As a teenager, I started bowling and he would take me and my brother and friends to tournaments throughout the southeast. He continued to be there for me as I became a man. He was the first person I told of my pending wedding to my now my wife, Charlene, who I have been married to for 35 years.
One of the greatest lessons he taught me was how to be a man. It was not what he said, but what he showed in action. By watching him, I learned to get up every morning and go to work. And never to be late. Then, when you get off, go home to your family.
The greatest thing he did for me was to express his pride in me. Several years ago, I surprised him on Father's Day by showing up at his church that Sunday morning. As we were leaving, he told me that he was proud of me and the man I had become. Daddy, you made an impact on this world and will not be forgotten.
