“ my memory of my dad: very extensive. i could fill several volumes on memories alone. but i will be brief: if you know me you know my dad. because he is a man: no more, no less. he was just. he was compassionate. he valued the ethic that work was the cornerstone of a persons character. and despite his rather abrupt way of dealing with the people around him, he loved.

“ Thank you so much for sharing time with him. Loved every second that I had with him. Would love to have so much more . I will truly miss him more than anyone will ever know. Was just thinking I need to call and check on him.

“ Always had a great respect for what I considered to be a good friend. And one of the few manly men I had the privilege to know. He was a warrior but could show great compassion. The only man I ever called Dad, after losing my own father. My father's first name, William, coincidence? I think not. Rest easy warrior, I'll see you again.
